TEMPORARY EXHIBITIONS:

Wassily Kandinsky, František Kupka, and Arnold Schönberg: Abstraction and Atonality

May 12, 2011 – July 31, 2011

This exhibition features three very important individuals of the art world - Wassily Kandinsky, František Kupka and Arnold Schönberg and will be the highlight of the year. Wassily Kandinsky and Arnold Schönberg are something very unique for Prague and to exhibit these artists together has an internal logic. The exhibition's concept is based on the examination of the relationship between abstraction and atonality, whose principles are related. Indeed, patterns of music and visual compositions were to a large extent interlinked at the beginning of the twentieth century.

Museum Kampa houses one of the largest private collections of works by Frantisek Kupka with over 200 works stemming from his early years until his passing in 1957. This collection fully represents works from the time period when the artist moved into purely abstract expression, which had a very difficult evolvement in Frantisek Kupka. His development to this form of art was completely different to that of other pioneers of abstract art. Wassily Kandinsky matured to abstraction at the same time, but based on a very different thought processes. He was inspired by natural processes and their complicated transformations. Where Arnold Schönberg connected musical discoveries with artistic, even though the axis and the main contributor lies in music.

In addition, this exhibition is included in the Prague Spring Music Festival programme, and a concert focusing on this exhibition will be held in Museum Kampa on May 31, 2011. This cooperation with Prague Spring gives the exhibition a new dimension and will attract a lot of interest and a wide range of visitors.

THE OPEN WALL PROJECT

By the artist Shan Shan Sheng

June 9 – August 31, 2011

Shan Shan Sheng's Open Wall is a large-scale glass installation re-interpreting a section of the Great Wall. Consisting of 2,208 glass bricks that correspond to the years of the Great Wall's Construction, the Open Wall Project is approximately 20 m (55ft) long, 2 m (6ft) high and 55 cm (2ft) deep. Sheng uses translucent Venetian glass, a medium she has worked with extensively, to allude to dynastic Chinese architecture. Warm colors of red, gold and yellow used intermittently in layers making this an exquisite luminous structure. This creation of a modern work of art inspired by a great Chinese monument ultimately will represent the newfound openness of contemporary China: A country that wishes to retain its rich cultural heritage while being open to global economy and the international exchange of ideas. With her Open Wall Shan Shan Sheng presents a temporary threshold between water and sky, past and present and the walled cities of Venice and China, marking this critical intersection of Chinese and Western cultures.

Jindřich Vík

5. 8. – 18. 9. 2011

Vladislav Mirvald

26. 8. - 6. 12. 2011

Not so long ago Vladislav Mirvald's works were presented at a large-scale exhibition at the West Bohemian Gallery in Plzeň. Museum Kampa will be presenting an exhibition of his works, which will concentrate on one theme. Visitors will see cycles, which have never been exhibited together. Vladislav Mirvald artistic expression emerges from the examination of random patterns and descriptive geometry.
